

Call for papers:
2022 Annual Conference on
Macroeconomics and Monetary Policy
Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco

Dear colleague,

The Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco is hosting its annual one-day conference on macroeconomics and monetary policy in San Francisco on Friday, March 25, 2022.

The conference aims to attract top researchers by bringing together academic and central bank economists, financial market practitioners, and policymakers. Our objective is to assemble a program of the highest quality and interest.

We invite you and your colleagues to submit research that is approximately at the working paper stage. We are interested in a wide set of fields that help inform an understanding and the achievement of the dual goals of price stability and full employment that is broad and inclusive. This includes related fields of macroeconomics, finance, labor economics, international economics, applied microeconomics, public finance, climate economics, and others. Both empirical and theoretical submissions are encouraged.

Those interested in presenting research at this conference should send a PDF of their paper or a detailed abstract to SF.ER.Macroconference@sf.frb.org by October 22, 2021. Authors of accepted papers will be notified by November 12, 2021. We are currently planning for a virtual 2022 conference but are preparing for the possibility of an in-person event should the situation permit. Organizers will cover reasonable travel expenses for authors of accepted papers and for discussants in the event of an in-person conference. Electronic copies of the conference papers will be made available at <http://www.frbsf.org/economic-research/events/>, but a conference volume will not be published.

Please address any questions to SF.ER.Macroconference@sf.frb.org.

Please feel free to circulate this call for papers with your colleagues. We look forward to your participation.

Sincerely,

Andrew Foerster, Huiyu Li, Fernanda Nechio, and Nicolas Petrosky-Nadeau